Dozens hurt in massive pileup on QE2

Snowstorm. More than 45 vehicles damaged in chain-reaction collision

ANNALISE KLINGBEIL

Dozens of people were hurt on Thursday morning in a massive crash involving more than 100 vehicles south of Edmonton on Highway 2.

At about 11:30 a.m., RCMP responded to a multiple-vehicle collision northbound on Highway 2, near Leduc. The initial crash caused several other collisions and in total more than 100 vehicles were involved and 45 sustained damage, police say. While Alberta Health Services (AHS) initially reported that 300 people were enroute to hospitals in Edmonton and area as a result of the pileup, by 4:30 p.m. the number of injured had been updated to about 100 people.

One person was transported to the University of Alberta Hospital in serious condition and 21 others were taken to hospital in moderate or minor condition by EMS from Wetaskiwin and area. About 80 other people with minor injuries were treated at the scene, AHS says.

Edmonton Transit provided buses to shelter and evacuate injured patients from the scene and Edmonton Police Service officers escorted the buses. A bus was also used to transport people without injuries to Wetaskiwin.

After the crash, Kerry Williamson, spokesperson for AHS, said several hospitals in the Edmonton zone were ready to treat the injured patients.

"There's probably about 10 different hospitals, maybe more, that we're utilizing," he said, adding the massive collision initially spurred a code orange, meaning a mass casualty mode, at local hospitals. "We haven't dealt with anything like this, but we do have plans."

Spring snowstorm pounds Edmonton

Winter wallop. City will not institute parking ban despite massive storm

RYAN TUMILTY
ryan.tumilty@metronews.ca

Mother Nature threw Edmonton into commuter chaos Monday afternoon, as the city was pounded with snow and for the first time ever Anthony Henday Drive was closed to all traffic.

Edmonton police made the decision to close the road around 3:30 p.m. and then reopened the freeway at 5:30 p.m., but put a tow ban in place.

Edmonton police said between 6 a.m. and 4:55 p.m. there were 115 property damage collisions, nine injury crashes and nine hit-and-run collisions.

Despite the blanketing of snow, the city is not planning to institute a seasonal parking ban.

Director of roadway maintenance Bob Dunford said he is expecting the snow to continue into Friday morning, but after that the city is banking on the weather turning around.

"It looks like after that the weather is going to favour us, which is very nice, so we will not be implementing the parking ban," he said.

Dunford said the city would also continue with a residential blading program that is underway, though it would obviously be delayed by the new storm.

"We have made that commitment that once we start a cycle we complete a cycle," he said.

Dunford said the decision on the parking ban is open to change, but right now he expects to continue with the plan.

"It could change if for whatever reason the forecast is incorrect and things change by tomorrow morning, we may choose to implement it for the next day," he said.

Gas tax revenue

Mandel pleased with feds' budget

Yesterday's federal budget included a boost to Canada's cities, which Mayor Stephen Mandel said can be used for LRT, road projects and other pressing civic needs.

Finance Minister Jim Flaherty announced a host of measures in the budget for cities, all of which should bring more money for projects in Edmonton.

"Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to announce the creation of the new Building Canada plan, the largest long-term federal commitment to Canadian infrastructure in our nation's history," he said during the budget speech.

That investment includes a new fund worth $14 billion over the next 10 years, a re-commitment to GST rebates and gas tax revenue for municipalities.

Mandel said he welcomed the federal government's investment in infrastructure, as well as money set aside for social housing.

"There is a reasonable amount of money for housing, reasonable amount of money for homelessness," he said.

Mandel credited Edmonton Coun. Karen Leibovici, who is president of the Federation of Canadian Municipalities, for advocating to get the funding.

"I think Coun. Leibovici deserves great credit. She has been travelling across the country and working with the federal government," said Mandel.

Parking ban

During the city's last parking ban last week, the city handed out more than 1,400 tickets for people who failed to move their vehicles.

- The city has to provide a minimum of eight hours' notice before implementing a parking ban.
- A snowfall warning covered most of Northern and Central Alberta on Thursday, but Environment Canada began removing them on Thursday night.

Community building. Boyle Street undergoing a Renaissance

It was a great step forward for the Boyle Street community.

The first phase of the Boyle Renaissance Plaza opened on Thursday, including a 14,000-square-foot community centre and 150 affordable homes.

"This was a dream we all had to improve this area to make it better for everyone," Mayor Stephen Mandel said. "We still have a long way to go, but it is a great foundation."

The project is being funded with $25 million from the province, $13 million from the city, $3 million from the YMCA and $1.2 million from the Capital Region Housing Corporation.

Former premier Ed Stelmach, who championed the development while in office, said the benefits are already apparent. "We can see the difference in a community — crime is down, people have a safer environment and they can refresh their life," he said.

Franco Savoia, former president of the YMCA who worked on the project, said putting the affordable housing alongside the community centre was a conscious decision.

"To serve families and individuals at risk, you have to go broader, you have to serve the entire family," Savoia said.

Physician salaries. Alberta doctors gird for PR war with province

The province's doctors are being told to prepare for a lengthy battle with the government, as their representative body digs in for a protracted public-relations war over physician contracts.

"You are likely to observe a veritable firestorm of back-and-forth commentary from the Alberta Medical Association and government in the weeks ahead," AMA president Dr. Michael Giuffre wrote on Thursday in a letter to members.

Giuffre said he will reveal more details of the AMA's plan on Friday, which marks the deadline set by Health Minister Fred Horne for doctors to come back to him with a new proposal for physician compensation.

If the AMA fails to respond, Horne has not ruled out unilaterally imposing a fee schedule on doctors.

"I assure you that the AMA will oppose any imposition by the minister," Giuffre wrote to AMA members.

"As you can see, we are not playing a 48-hour game," Giuffre added. "This is for the long haul and I fear we have real struggles ahead."

Hundreds of pharmacists from across the province rallied at the legislature on Thursday to protest budget cuts they say will drastically affect Alberta pharmacies.

"The cutbacks will affect the sustainability of pharmacies, which will then jeopardize the care of all Albertans."

Aileen Jang, a protest organizer who owns two pharmacies in Edmonton saw protesters march from Corona LRT station to the legislature while waving placards and chanting, "Pharmacists care, no matter where."

At the legislature, they asked the government to respect their profession and examine how recent budget cuts will affect patient care.

"The health of all Albertans will be impacted," said Aileen

Jang, a protest organizer who owns two pharmacies in Edmonton. "The cutbacks will affect the sustainability of pharmacies, which will then jeopardize the care of all Albertans."

Liberal MLA David Swann spoke at the rally and told the hordes of pharmacists that he supported them.

"This is a very poor process that is imposed, both the price of drugs and the price of your fees. That cannot be allowed to continue," he said.

The demonstrators, who travelled from Lethbridge, Cochrane, Calgary, Red Deer, Olds, Wetaskiwin, Vegreville and many other places, wore white lab coats over their winter jackets.

Rita Lyster, a pharmacist and pharmacy owner, closed her store in Barrhead to travel to Edmonton for the rally.

She said the government changes will have a direct impact on her customers.

"I can afford no longer to give my advice away for free, and that breaks my heart," she said.

Crime. Search on for fraud suspect after theft of credit cards from rec centres

Edmonton police are seeking assistance in identifying a suspect they say is responsible for the theft and use of credit cards from locker-rooms at southwest-area recreation centres.

According to a release issued Thursday, numerous credit cards and personal identification were stolen March 15.

Police said an unknown male used the stolen credit cards within hours to purchase electronics and gift cards totalling about $7,000.

He also attempted to purchase fuel for his truck, police said, which is described as a four-door newer model Dodge truck (2500 or 3500 Series), medium blue in colour, with a burnt-out passenger side fog lamp and a chrome toolbox in the back. The truck also appears to have out-of-province licence plates, which police

Alberta School Boards Association.

The provincial group is letting each local board make up its own mind on the proposed deal with teachers

The Alberta School Boards Association is encouraging its members to make up their own minds about the proposed deal with the province's teachers.

Since news of the deal first emerged last week, school boards across the province have been weighing in on the agreement. Edmonton and Calgary's public school boards, the largest in the province, both rejected the deal, but more than 20 school boards have endorsed it.

"We are not rejecting the deal (and) we are not blanket endorsing it. We are saying school boards absolutely need to make this decision," said the ASBA's president Jacquie Hansen.

Hansen said local boards are in the best position to know if this deal will work for them.

"This motion speaks to our association's fundamental belief in local decision-making; individual school boards are in the best position to assess this framework deal."

Education Minister Jeff Johnson was pleased with the ASBA's decision and says he agrees the issues vary from board to board and decisions should be made at the local level.

The government has also given the ASBA a comfort letter to be shared with boards, which Hansen said she hopes could help some feel more at ease with the deal.

"School boards need some more answers to this and the comfort letter is certainly a great start," said Hansen.

When the first few MySpace users died, there was public debate about the ethics of journalists lifting quotes from their bereaved friends public grieving. But today, nobody bats an eye when a journalist quotes the online mourners.

This is not because of some identifiable turning point or a Supreme Court decision. Rather it's become normalized.

Even after Facebook users die, their birthdays and anniversaries see activity spikes as loved ones commune with them.

In the six years I've been on Facebook, I've left messages to three dead friends and acquaintances, left encouraging words on someone's suicide note and was invited to a "going away" party from someone diagnosed with a terminal illness (who fortunately had many parties afterward).

EXPLORING THE DIGITAL AFTERLIFE — ON SOCIAL MEDIA

Morbid it might seem, it's also common sense: If we now live much of our lives online, then naturally we die there, too.

But just how far will dying in the digital age go?

One British company is trying to make talking to the dead a two-way street. Called LivesOn, the program creates a bot that lurks on Twitter, examines your tweeting style and, once dead, tries to mimic you.

Because it's still in trial, few have seen it in action. If I signed up, would it continue my reputation of tweeting cat videos? What if it throws my support behind the Communist Party in the next election? That's one gaffe I can't correct.

More to the point, it's just one of several new players in the biggest revolution the death industry has seen since the Victorians started outsourcing burial traditions to funeral homes. Back then it meant the salon became a "living room." Today it means charging families SOCAN music licensing fees to play a dead loved one's favourite song.

The current revolution sees companies like Securesafe in the growing "digital asset management" industry helping people access and delete their deceased loved one's accounts. It's added a new dimension to estate management, where possessions aren't the only personal relics we leave behind.

But trends show that people want access to the dead. Not closure.

As tech site Mashable puts it, we're now "Interfacing With the Dead" — a term that would send sparks up Robocop's spine. It could leave one wondering how long before we're offered posthumous avatars.

Until then, however, we're unconsciously working on our memorials. Since Facebook's inception nine years ago, an estimated 30 million users have died. But only in rare instances are their profiles shut down.

No escape

If we now live much of our lives online, then naturally we die there, too.

The protocol rather is to preserve the profile or, with proof of death, change it to a "memorial" page. Did Facebook have this in mind when it started letting people retroactively add content to their Timeline — starting from their first breath?

Of course, if there's one thing we've learned from MySpace, Internet companies come and go quickly. But if Facebook's own numbers — 1.06 billion active users — is true, it might just outlast all of us.

So perhaps this is something to consider before your next selfie or public complaint about the lack of pickles on your burger: Is this part of your life story?

5 Home + Garden Show highlights

The Edmonton Home + Garden Show started Thursday and is on through Sunday at the Edmonton Expo Centre. Here is a taste of what is on offer.

HEATHER MCINTYRE
heather.mcintyre@metronews.ca

Main stage

Experts will take to the stage to offer insight and advice on the start-to-finish progress for a plethora of projects they're working on, and chances are you'll walk away with ideas of your own. The celebrity lineup includes: HGTV's Bryan Baeumler (Leave it to Bryan), HGTV's Paul Lafrance (Decked Out, Deck Wars), local designer Rosalyn Lazaruk (Wicket Blue Interiors), local artist Rachel Curry and more.

NAIT-ure calls

Students from NAIT's Landscape Architectural Technology program have been divided into groups and will bring class projects to life, reacquainting attendees with their inner child through a Peter Pan garden theme that reflects how recycled items can inspire creative play in the backyard. There will also be a "how to" area as well as a photo booth in the Neverland space.

Cooking stage

Those with culinary talent will step into an ultra-modern kitchen to prepare tasty, healthy meals, which audience members will be able to taste and even get the recipes for. The culinary experts include: Karlynn Johnson (The Kitchen Magpie), Paul McGreevy (Craft executive chef), Paul Shufelt (Century Hospitality Group VP), Aldene Atkinson (Crave Cupcakes chef) and more.

Food truck alley

If you're more interested in eating on the spot, check out Edmonton's latest food craze — food trucks. Six of the city's favourites will be on hand in Hall A of the Edmonton Expo Centre, including Bully Food Truck, Smoke House BBQ, Eva Sweet, Fat Franks, Bit City Sandwich and Fiasco Gelato.

Ask a designer

Any dilemmas with your own do-it-yourself projects and designs can be brought to professionals for a free 15-minute consultation. Some of Alberta's top designers will be on hand to display their top design picks for 2013. If you come with photos and swatches, you will be put on the right path with regards to flooring, carpets, textiles and furniture.

Flaherty calls

Federal budget. Finance minister adds no new money while largely reshuffling expenses

Flaherty's mission

Canadians have faith "that their government will be a benign and silent partner in their enterprise, not an overbearing behemoth squeezing them at every turn."

Finance Minister Jim Flaherty to the House of Commons in his budget speech.

When Jim Flaherty was a young man, they called it a brake stand — one foot on the gas and one on the brake, creating lots of noise and plumes of blue smoke but moving the vehicle sideways if at all.

Stephen Harper's finance minister is banking that all the torque in his eighth federal budget, delivered Thursday, will propel the Canadian economy forward in a burst sometime next year.

It's all geared to a fall 2015 election date, when Prime Minister Stephen Harper hopes to woo Canadian voters with the first balanced federal budget since 2008.

In the meantime, Flaherty's foot remains firmly on the spending brake in a 2013-14 fiscal blueprint that shuffles priorities, re-allocates resources and cracks down on tax cheats but adds no new money while continuing dramatic cuts to direct program expenses.

It'll get you the skills to pay the bills

The key feature is the Canada Job Grant. According to the budget, the grant "could provide $15,000 or more per person" for short-term training. Only $5,000 would be contributed by the federal government, with matching contributions coming from provinces and employers. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

The outside world under one tent

The Canadian International Development Agency, which performs aid work in developing countries, will be swallowed up by the Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade.

The new entity will be called the Department of Foreign Affairs, Trade and Development. The government says it "will continue to serve the same functions as the old departments."

two weeks is projected to be $25.9 billion — exactly as forecast in the fall fiscal update but up significantly from the $21.1 billion posited by Flaherty in last March's budget.

Part of that bump comes from a one-time, $2.4-billion increase in Ottawa's nuclear-cleanup liability.

Total spending, including debt-servicing charges, will rise to $282.6 billion this year, up less than one per cent on the 2012-13 spending envelope of $280.1 billion. That's effectively a cut after inflation and population growth are factored in.

More significantly, direct program expenses — which exclude major transfers to other levels of government — are projected to plunge almost $4 billion this year and another $2.5 billion in 2014-15. The exact nature of those program cuts remains something of a mystery.

"It's very much a status quo budget," said economist Derek Burleton of TD Bank. "Reallocation is a key theme." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Assumptions

While the budget is deeply conservative, many of its assumptions are not:

- Fighting tax loopholes and cheats will rake in half a billion dollars this year and rise to $1.3 billion the next.
- GST revenues, which rose 1.8 per cent in 2012-13, will grow 4.9 per cent annually.
- Corporate tax revenue will jump by 5.5 per cent a year, on average.

things to know about the budget

Call it the "judge-it" budget

Political opponents were not kind to the plan.

NDP Leader Tom Mulcair called it a "shell-game con job," and Green Party Leader Elizabeth May dubbed it the "fudge-it budget."

NDP Leader Tom Mulcair

"The propaganda machine is going to be working overtime, because they've repackaged and put together some old programs and given them new names," grouched Bob Rae, the interim Liberal leader.

Billions to back building boom

The Conservative government is devoting $14 billion over a decade by renewing a deal that helps cities invest in infrastructure.

"Infrastructure creates jobs, supports trade and fuels economic growth," Finance Minister Jim Flaherty said.

The new Building Canada Fund will replace a seven-year deal set to expire next year and give provincial and municipal governments time to plan and to figure out how to match the funding.

Can't afford to stay active AND clothe your baby? Feds have you covered

The federal government is cutting tariffs on baby clothing and athletic equipment in hopes the price breaks trickle down to consumers.

Finance Minister Jim Flaherty announced the $76-million cut in reaction to ongoing discrepancies between Canada and the U.S. "Some products consistently cost more in Canada compared to the exact same products sold in the United States," the budget said.

The tariff cut applies to baby clothing and sports and athletic equipment, such as ice skates, hockey equipment, skis, snowboards and golf clubs. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Scotland sets date for vote on independence

Scottish leader Alex Salmond has set Sept. 18, 2014, as the date for an independence referendum that could radically alter the shape of the U.K., calling it a historic opportunity to create a better country.

Salmond said it would be a day when Scotland takes "responsibility for our country, when we are able to speak with our own voice, choose our own direction and contribute in our own distinct way."

His party wants to end more than 300 years of union with England. The leader argued independence would give Scotland a "new, more modern" relationship with other U.K. nations. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Man gets jail for prostitution op at Zumba studio

An insurance agent who helped run a prostitution operation out of his mistress's Zumba studio and watched secretly videotaped sex acts was ordered to spend 20 days in jail in a scandal that rocked a small northeastern U.S. town.

Prosecutors say Mark Strong Sr. was involved in every facet of the operation with fitness instructor Alexis Wright. He even suggested ways to boost profits by marketing to higher-paying fetish clients and engaging with multiple men at the same time, prosecutors said.

Before the sentencing, his wife broke down while pleading for leniency. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Milestone

YouTube reaches 1B users a month

YouTube says more than one billion people are now visiting its video site each month to watch everything from clips of cute kittens to scenes of social unrest around the world.

The milestone, announced Wednesday, marks another step in YouTube's evolution from a quirky startup launched in 2005 to one of the most influential forces in today's media landscape.

Google bought YouTube for $1.76 billion US in 2006 when the site had an estimated 50 million users. Since late 2011, it has refocused its site to prioritize watching along distinct channels, seen as better allowing advertisers to focus on certain genres of content. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Switching off

For good? Hundreds of millions participate in Earth Hour, but can 60 minutes make a difference?

Criticism

"For the green movement to grow it needs to be relevant to daily lives and to local issues."

Mike Shanahan of the International Institute for Environment and Development

Be prepared — at 8:30 p.m. on Saturday the lights turn off. From Tokyo to Toronto, Palestine to Papua New Guinea, hundreds of millions of people in more than 150 countries will participate in the world's largest co-ordinated action on climate change, led by the World Wildlife Fund.

Organizers say it's a "symbolic" action, and there will be no measurement of its impact. But campaigners believe it's important to challenge our relationship with technology.

"People need to see collective action to take the issue seriously," says Peter Madden, CEO of the international group Forum for the Future. "Changes can be attractive if they are re-enforced socially."

With technology increasingly embedded in everyday life, it's time to make smarter choices, says Madden. "The most exciting innovations are making energy use visible. Phone apps can give you data, heaters can learn when they are needed."

The Beyond Zero Emissions group estimates that energy demand could be halved if people replaced their appliances with more efficient models. Patio heaters remain among the worst offenders, and campaigners are aiming for 100 per cent LED lighting.

For hardliners, living off-grid has become increasingly possible. "There is cheaper and more reliable energy available such as ground-source and mini turbines — a great alternative to the rising cost of traditional fuel," says Madden.

However, Earth Hour's "global switch-off" concept has also been criticized, and participation and online involvement have dropped off this year.

Deadly riots erupt in Myanmar over ethnic tensions

Myanmar. At least five dead, mosque burned in Buddhist majority city of Meikhtila

At least five people died and a mosque was burned in two days of rioting in a central Myanmar town, in the latest challenge for the government in keeping the peace while making the transition from strong-arm military rule to pluralist democracy.

State-controlled media Thursday night broke their silence on the violence in Meikhtila, with government television announcing that five people had been killed and 39 injured in rioting that was triggered by an argument between a Muslim gold shop owner and his Buddhist customers.

Occasional isolated violence involving Myanmar's majority Buddhist and minority Muslim communities has occurred for decades. But the risk of spreading violence was underlined last year by clashes in the western state of Rakhine between ethnic Rakhine Buddhists and Muslim Rohingya that left about 200 people dead and more than 100,000 homeless.

Several Muslim-owned shops and at least one mosque were burned Wednesday. Showing sensitivity to the threat of further inflaming feelings, state television said one "religious building" was destroyed along with a township education office, some shops and some vehicles.

Man who killed cop 'wasn't operating in our world': Lawyer

Distressed. Richard Kachkar's attorney says his client had shown signs of a major mental disorder for years

Richard Kachkar
THE CANADIAN PRESS/HANDOUT

A barefoot man who killed a police officer with a stolen snowplow in Toronto after a bizarre rampage through the streets two years ago had clearly lost his grip on reality, his first-degree murder trial heard Thursday.

In closing submissions, defence lawyer Bob Richardson said Richard Kachkar could not be held criminally responsible given his delusional state.

"He lacked capacity to form criminal intent," Richardson told the jury.

"He wasn't operating in our world."

Dressed in light dress pants and shirt under a dark blazer, Kachkar, 44, listened impassively as his lawyer reprised the evidence of three psychiatrists, who concluded he was psychotic when he struck and left a dying Sgt. Ryan Russell, 35, bleeding in the snow.

Richardson reminded jurors how a shoeless Kachkar had bolted from a downtown shelter out into the snow on the early morning of Jan. 12, 2011.

"Whatever slim hold Mr. Kachkar may have had on reality, slips away," Richardson said.

Kachkar went into and then fled a nearby doughnut shop, jumping into the idling snowplow. He drove erratically through the streets, making frequent U-turns, hitting cars and yelling about Chinese technology, the Taliban and microchips in his body.

Another strange twist in Quebec chopper jailbreak

Identity crisis. One of the four people arrested gave police a fake name; his real identity has yet to be confirmed

Helicopter hijacking

"They took out a gun and said, 'You're going to St-Jerome prison.'"

Yves Le Roux, the owner of Passport Helico, where pilot and hijacking victim Sebastien Foray works.

The people accused of orchestrating this week's stunning jailbreak by helicopter appear to have had yet another surprise up their sleeve.

As it turns out, one of the suspects isn't who he says he is.

Authorities say one of the four people arrested gave them a fake name and, after having checked his fingerprints, they're now working to confirm his real identity.

The man, who identified himself as Yage Beaudoin, is accused of being one of two people who hijacked a helicopter and helped a pair of inmates escape last weekend near Montreal.

He allegedly tried to dupe authorities one more time.

Quebec provincial police say the suspect told them during fingerprinting that the name he'd given them was fake, and that he gave them a second one which they're now in the process of checking.

The dramatic prison escape of Benjamin Hudon-Barbeau and Danny Provencal has already made headlines around the world.

Two accomplices, including the now-unidentified one, allegedly rented a helicopter, pointed a gun at the young pilot and forced him to land on a tower at St-Jerome prison.

From there, they tossed a rope out the window, and the two inmates came climbing up from the yard and toward dreams of freedom.

However, that freedom was short-lived. All four men were arrested within hours and they now face nearly two-dozen criminal charges — including breaking out of prison, kidnapping and pointing a gun at someone. THE CANADIAN PRESS

He's not down with getting arrested

Police needed to call the fire department to help bring a suspected car thief down from his hiding spot on the roof of a two-and-a-half-storey in Winnipeg Thursday morning. The 30-year-old man—wearing only a basketball jersey in the frigid -31 C temperatures—remained on the roof for nearly an hour, smoking cigarettes and talking to the cops who surrounded the house, before finally coming down in a bucket, peacefully. The man and a 29-year-old woman are facing motor vehicle theft charges. SHANE GIBSON/METRO IN WINNIPEG

New law in India hailed as a victory for women

Women's rights.

Stalking, voyeurism and sexual harassment among the targets of the legislation

India's Parliament passed a sweeping new law Thursday to protect women against sexual violence in response to a fatal December gang rape and beating of a young woman on a bus in New Delhi.

The new law, which still requires the president's signature before it becomes official, makes stalking, voyeurism and sexual harassment a crime. It also provides for the death penalty for repeat offenders or for rape attacks that lead to the victim's

Milestone

The law was hurried through Parliament after a gang rape on a bus in December sparked nationwide protests demanding the government do more to safeguard women.

- But the government's refusal to criminalize marital rape was criticized.

death. The law makes it a crime for police to refuse to open cases when they receive complaints of sexual attacks.

Activists hailed the law as a milestone even as they raised concerns over certain provisions.

MPs motion to condemn sex selection abortion ruled non-votable

A Conservative MP's bid to have Parliament condemn the practice of sex-selective abortion has been short-circuited.

A House of Commons sub-committee that oversees private members' business has deemed Mark Warawa's motion to be non-votable. That means the non-binding motion will not be debated, much less voted upon, sparing Stephen Harper from another embarrassing split in Conservative ranks over an issue the PM has promised his government won't re-open. Warawa is vowing to appeal what he calls the sub-committee's "shocking and undemocratic decision."

Women's group critical of Muslim Brotherhood

Egypt's official women's rights council says Islamists who reject a UN blueprint to combat violence against women and girls are promoting the idea that Islam favours violence against women. Last week, 131 countries at the United Nations approved the non-binding document to combat violence against women and girls. Egypt's ruling Muslim Brotherhood strongly objected to the document, saying it clashed with Islamic principles. In Cairo on Thursday the head of the women's council, Mervat Tellawy, called on the Brotherhood to stop using religion to promote its agenda. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Police exercise ends in deadly helicopter crash

'There was blood on the ground.' At least one killed after two choppers collide near Berlin stadium as they approached for landing

Two helicopters clipped each other and crashed as they landed in a snowstorm near Berlin's Olympic Stadium during a federal police exercise on Thursday, leaving one person dead and several injured, German authorities said.

One of the helicopter pilots died at the scene, fire service spokesman Stephan Fleischer said. Five people were injured, four of them seriously, he added.

It wasn't immediately clear whether the injured people were in the helicopters, Fleischer said. He didn't have details on how the accident happened.

Pictures from the scene showed one of the helicopters lying on its side in the snow in a field behind the stadium and the other next to it, still upright.

Eyewitness Johannes Malinowski said on N-tv television that he saw three helicopters approaching and that the snow on the field was being kicked up by the aircraft, so "you couldn't see a whole lot anymore."

Then "there was a big bang and someone shouted, 'Everybody on the ground,'" he said. "And then we looked up and there was blood on the ground."

The police were conducting a training exercise on dealing with football violence.

Power company points finger at natural causes. What's behind massive death of prawns in Chile?

Endesa Chile is denying any wrongdoing in the death of thousands of shrimp that washed ashore in southern Chile.

Local fishermen have blamed the country's leading electricity generator for the die-off that left a carpet of red prawns on a beach in Coronel, about 530 kilometres south of the capital on Wednesday.

Endesa Chile project manager Marcelo said Thursday that company studies indicate the die-off "is due to the flow of deep waters coming from the continental platform, induced by currents of wind on the ocean."

He says Endesa plans to co-operate with the official investigation.

Migrant worker's behalf

Rights group files privacy complaint over reality TV raid

A B.C. civil-rights group has filed a complaint with the federal privacy commissioner saying Canada's border agency broke the law with a reality TV show.

The B.C. Civil Liberties Association's complaint, filed on behalf of a migrant worker who was removed from Canada Wednesday, says the reality show violates the federal Privacy Act.

The group's executive director, Josh Paterson, says the filming violated the privacy rights of vulnerable migrant workers.

A film crew for the show Border Security accompanied officers of Canada Border Services Agency last week when they raided a Vancouver construction site and arrested six people.

The BCCLA says the crew was also present during an interrogation of Oscar Mata Duran an hour after the arrest when he was asked to sign a consent form from the filming, without fully explaining what he was signing.

Pipeline bombing video game promo to be probed

Pipe Trouble. Public broadcaster in hot water with Ontario gov. after blog post offers visitors a free trial

Ontario Premier Kathleen Wynne says she'll be looking into an online game partially paid for and promoted by a taxpayer-funded broadcaster that shows the bombing of a gas pipeline.

A blog post supporting the game appeared on the website of TV Ontario. It also provides a link to the game, called "Pipe Trouble," and offers a free trial.

But questions were raised Thursday about the game's introductory video, which appears to show activists protesting before a pipeline blows up. The TVO blog describes "Pipe Trouble" as a "companion ethical game" to a documentary that deals with local opposition to pipelines and the bombing of pipelines in Peace River, B.C. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Beautiful in

Today, bombshells explode on the scene and quickly disappear. There is no iconic image of beauty to represent the past decade. Angelina Jolie's impossible curves are still sexy, but so are Tina Fey's intelligence and Serena Williams' athleticism.

Melita Kuburas explores why the transient nature of beauty is problematic.

I didn't set out to find the Marilyn Monroe of my generation, the one beauty icon that speaks to us all — but then I saw her staring at me.

With her imperfect teeth, messy, bleached hair and morning-after complexion, musician Liza Thorn is the anti-Marilyn, and we need more like her.

Thorn's unlikely ascent as a style icon — she has an affinity for ripped stockings and tattered coats — was featured last month in The New York Times' fashion app The Collection. "She is a beguiling presence," writes NYT's William Van Meter. Thorn likely won't capture our attention for long, but the fascination with her carefree look is symbolic of a change that's occurred within the beauty industry. There is no longer a single beauty or style icon that captures our admiration. Bombshells explode onto the scene, we become enraptured, then quickly move on to someone else.

"We used to look to magazine supermodels and to Hollywood celebrities and starlets to define iconic beauty. But not only is Hollywood a little bit more diverse, our definitions and expectations for beauty are far more diverse," says Sidneyyeve Matrix, associate professor of media and film at Queen's University in Kingston, Ont.

Matrix says the online space has "democratized" the beauty industry.

"Social media is now a mainstream broadcast platform for us," she says. "We can all chime in and vote for what we think is interesting and smart and beautiful."

Thanks to Instagram, Tumblr and YouTube, we've dethroned the beauty mavens with our own, more diverse images and content, Matrix says.

You don't have to be a magazine editor to review makeup, attend Fashion Week or participate in trunk shows or store openings.

Those are some of the perks Kerrilyn Wong has enjoyed since she started writing her blog, There's Something About Kerri. Wong, 26, has a knack for spotting unique pieces and putting together enviable outfits. But she gravitated to beauty blogs for another reason — at five foot four, she couldn't relate to the leggy models in magazines.

"Their body proportions were not similar to mine," writes Wong from Vancouver, where she's a student at BCIT. "The hemline of a dress on a magazine model may fall above her knees, but for shorter girls, it may fall to their calves and make them appear stubby."

Beauty blogs are seen as more relatable than mainstream publications because the writers have insecurities

Sorry folks — beauty icons are over a heartbeat

Quoted

"If we are feeling insecure, we always want to find a way to make ourselves continue to feel insecure. Having images in the media that are so beautiful and so glamorous keeps us in our place. So, there's a part of us that wants it; it feeds that part of us to feel inadequate." Kimberly Moffit, psychotherapist, on why we feed on aspirational images of beauty.

similar to our own. Wong, for instance, has shared about her own dieting and exercise, talking openly about the body parts she's focusing on toning up.

But that "realness" factor is deceiving, argues Sabrina Maddeaux, managing editor of Toronto Standard, an online publication that covers urban affairs, style and culture. Most popular bloggers are not challenging the status quo, she says.

"I think blogs, social media and 'street style' started off as positive forces for diversity in beauty and fashion, but as they've become more associated, supported and controlled by mainstream media outlets, brands and advertisers, they've become quite harmful," Maddeaux says.

"A lot of these bloggers have risen to fame through the support of major media outlets and brands, who then turn around and use their association with them to say: 'Look at us! We're being real!' But they're just different versions of the same girls they've always featured in magazines and campaigns."

Maddeaux sees a superficial improvement when it comes to diversity in magazines.

Stars like Kim Kardashian, Christina Hendricks and Beyoncé are praised for their "curvier" bodies and accept their stardom as proof that Hollywood supports a healthier body image. But while those women are exceptionally attractive, their beauty — doe eyes, puffy lips, large breasts — is ultimately rather conventional.

"Plus-size models still have to fit into a very specific size range — one that doesn't reflect the majority of women — and even the 'quirky, intelligent' celebrities like Tina Fey still look like most people's prom queen," Maddeaux argues. "Clearly, editorial teams are still way behind the curve on this."

Even though we don't have a single icon, there's still a standard of beauty or of physique that's hailed by the media as being attractive, says Kimberly Moffit, a Toronto-based psychotherapist.

"I think that can be discouraging for young women."

Both Moffit and Maddeaux are concerned about the idolization of single body parts — Pippa Middleton's butt, Scarlett Johansson's lips, a skinny runway model's "thigh gap."

"The rate at which we speed through icons, and fragmentize them, is actually much more de-humanizing than what we saw in decades past," Maddeaux says.

The transient nature of beauty icons has come with its own problems, but there is still a healthier balance than once existed.

"Think about Twiggy and how specific that body type was," Moffit says. "There were probably some women that really struggled because they saw pictures of Twiggy and wished that they could be like her."

When there is a dominant ideal of beauty — whether it's a blond woman with large breasts or a waifish woman with round eyes — we are less likely to see our own qualities as attractive.

A U.K. study published last year found evidence that our "visual diet" affects our acceptance of larger shapes and sizes. The authors say women who were shown pictures of heavier models were afterward more likely to accept theirs as an ideal body type.

If the study is right, then seeing more women with peculiar features like Thorn's praised for their looks may make us feel more accepting of our own.

as a person.

"She can be reflected now not just as a canvas for portraying the latest in some great designer's imagination. She has an authentic and legitimate appeal to the women who really care what she has to say," Mitchell says.

No matter what kind of women's magazine a woman is reading, beauty is part of the allure, says Mitchell. "Beautiful visuals and an aspirational quality are always part of the appeal of sinking into your favourite magazine." JESSICA SMITH/METRO

That's hot

Gossip columns obsess over it, magazines search for it and Paris Hilton trademarked the phrase, but our concept of what's hot seems to change too quickly to truly define. Beauty, on the other hand, is a little different.

"When I look at what's beautiful, that's people who have a classic beauty," says Lisa Tan, vice-president, fashion editor at Holt Renfrew. "Hot is what's sexy. (It changes) all the time. With Twitter, it can change tomorrow."

According to Dr. Peter Adamson, an otolaryngologist (head and neck surgeon) practising in facial plastic surgery, what we find hot, or attractive, is based on a composite of the hundreds of people we see around us. But beauty, says Adamson, isn't necessarily based on opinion. It's based on hormones.

"The features we find beautiful are those features we know are derived from high estrogen levels (in women)," he says, adding that high estrogen levels mean high fertility.

For a woman, these features include larger eyes, a smaller nose, a short, triangular jaw line and high cheekbones. For a man, beauty is based on features derived from high levels of androgen, he says. This means smaller eyes, lower brows, a square face, a strong jaw and a bigger nose.

"It's a very hard-wired thing. It's been with us for generations and generations," Adamson says.

Globalization of beauty:

There may never be another Marilyn Monroe. Tant is OK with that. According to Tant, there has been a major shift in the beauty world.

"When Marilyn Monroe was considered the look of the decade ... people didn't have a voice. Now, our standard of beauty is much more universal," she says.

The proof is in the magazines, which feature models and celebrities from all over the world. Blond hair and blue eyes have been replaced with an array of different colours.

"The number one model in the world, her name is Joan Smalls, she's from Puerto Rico. ... She's not blond hair and blue eyes. Fashion now is global," Tant says.

Adamson not only agrees with Tant, he can explain the phenomenon.

"The beauty ideal is changing, so the reason it's changing is that we're seeing the globalization of beauty," he says.

This shift in beauty has to do with immigration and social media. The more we see different cultures around us, the more we want to emulate their looks.

"The point is, there are many different celebrity and beauty icons today, and they're not all Caucasian, whereas, 50 years ago, they were," Adamson says. RITA POLIAKOV/METRO

Cover models not just pretty faces

There are a wide range of cover girls these days because the women's magazine industry is more fragmented, says Kerry Mitchell, a former publisher of women's magazines including Chatelaine and Flare.

"Media is just much more interactive. It's far easier now for consumers to align themselves with groups or tribes they have a particular affinity for," says Mitchell. "One group's idea of beauty or style can be very different than another's and that's OK."

Women have different expectations of different magazines, and cover models and the way they are — or aren't — written about must align with them, she says.

In fashion magazines, "the height of visual artistry is the appeal and you're less interested in the woman. But, in others, looking behind the veil and learning about the life behind the look is highly appealing," she says. For example, Mitchell places Canadian supermodel Coco Rocha among the top of today's beauty icons, in part because she has, over time, connected with a segment of the fashion audience

Q4. Lululemon says pants recall put customer loyalty ahead of, er, bottom line

Lululemon Athletica Inc., the Vancouver-based retailer of workout gear, admits the recent recall of its black Luon pants will put the pinch on earnings this year but says keeping customer loyalty is paramount.

"Delivering the top quality our guests expect is a critical factor in our differentiation in the marketplace," CEO Christine Day said in delivering an upbeat fourth-quarter earnings report Thursday that slightly exceeded analysts' expectations.

The company, which operates 211 stores in North America and Australia, said earlier this week it was pulling some of its stretchy black pants from its shelves because of manufacturing problems that made them too sheer.

Day said the pants had passed all of its standard and

Assad supporters hack BBC Twitter accounts

Online security. Prank is latest in string of web attacks by group called Syrian Electronic Army Supporters of Syrian President Bashar Assad hijacked the Twitter accounts of the BBC's weather and Arabic services on Thursday and posted messages that were by turns political, anti-Semitic and comical.

The BBC confirmed that several accounts had been hacked, saying it was "actively working" on the issues and expected them to be resolved shortly.

The hackers identified themselves as members of the Syrian Electronic Army, a group that has carried out a string of web attacks against targets such as Al-Jazeera, which it sees as sympathetic to Syria's rebels.

The BBC Weather, BBC Arabic and BBC Radio Ulster accounts appear to have been the targets. Among the messages posted on the BBC Weather Twitter account were "Long Live Syria Al-Assad" and "Saudi weather station down due to

A further message claimed Turkish leader Recep Tayyip Erdogan ordered terrorists to launch chemical weapons at civilian areas in North Syria. The hackers posted about 10 messages before signing off.

"Sorry about that, we were hacked. Normal service resumes," the account later posted after the offending tweets were deleted.

TD site forced offline by denial-of-service attack

TD Canada Trust says it was hit by a "targeted" cyber attack Thursday, forcing its banking website and mobile banking service to go offline for several hours.

The bank says the denial-of-service attack occurred mid-morning and prevented its customers from logging on to its website and mobile site.

A denial-of-service attack occurs when hackers flood a website with a large amount of fake traffic, thus preventing others from gaining access.

Bank spokeswoman Barbara Timmins said the attack had no effect on clients' personal information or accounts and that most of the services were up and running by mid-afternoon.

"This was a service disruption issue," Timmins said. "There was no compromise to customer data." The breach did not affect branch banking, telephone banking or ATMs.

She says the bank has been cognizant of similar attacks on financial institutions elsewhere, particularly in the U.S.

"We've seen activity, and you may be aware that unfortunately it's frequently been the case in other countries, in the United States, that large financial institutions have been targeted," she said.

TD says it will be monitoring the situation closely in the coming days.

Gun-magazine maker to leave Colorado over firearms bill

New legislation.

Magpul Industries says it will move to another state after lawmakers ban sale of magazines with over 15 rounds

A Colorado ammunition magazine manufacturer is making good on a threat to leave the state after lawmakers approved new gun laws.

Magpul Industries says it plans to begin packing up as soon as possible for a move to several other states. A search is under way to find new locations.

According to the Denver Post, Magpul chief operating officer Doug Smith said Wednesday a bill signed by Gov. John Hickenlooper that prohibits the sale of gun magazines with more than 15 rounds could seriously impact the company's business.

Magpul is based in Erie, which is about 30 miles north of Denver. It has about 200 workers and is the largest Colorado company that potentially would be affected by the bill, one of three state gun measures passed this year.

Coca-Cola to cut 750 jobs in U.S.

Coca-Cola says it's chopping 750 jobs in the U.S. as it continues to streamline its business. The world's biggest beverage maker says the cuts will be across the board and that affected individuals will be notified in coming weeks. The reductions represent roughly one per cent of the company's workforce of 75,000 in North America. A spokesman says about a quarter of the jobs will be in Atlanta, where the company is based. 1 Lulu of a lemon. Yoga togs manufacturer recalls its Luon yoga pants because if you look closely enough, you can see through them. I'm not sure why that's a problem, but the recall has led to a critical yoga pants shortage (really?). On the other hand, it's led to an over-abundance of clever headlines, like this one from fashionista.com: I See London, I See France: Lululemon Recalls See-through Yoga Pants.

2 Don't cry for me Argentina. But you can say a prayer if you like. This has led to unstable markets around the world. It's random, dude...

6 Fiscal fine print. Thursday's federal budget was pretty boring unless you're a tax lawyer or a business editor. Except for this item: Ottawa to raise tariff on goods from 72 countries, except baby clothes and hockey equipment, which are exempt. So that's Stephen Harper's plan for Canada.

The exhibit includes 91 species and represents only a small sample of the estimated one million birds that die annually in collisions with Toronto buildings, mostly office towers.

Charges dropped against developer

Last month, an Ontario judge found that the owner of a Toronto office building was responsible for the deaths of hundreds of birds that flew into its highly reflective windows. However, the judge acquitted the owner because it did due diligence in trying to rectify the problem. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Synopsis

When a judgment call costs him his job as a personal security guard to the president of the United States (Aaron Eckhart), Mike Banning (Gerard Butler) is reassigned to a desk job in the Treasury Department. He wants his old job back and a second chance to show he has the right stuff. He gets another crack at it when North Korean terrorists invade Washington, overtake the White House, killing POTUS's entire security team and kidnapping the prez. As the only man left with a gun and knowledge of the White House's security systems, he alone must protect the future of the free world!

Reel Guys

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Gerard Butler is the only one who can save the day in Olympus Has Fallen. HANDOUT

Fallin' for the action

Olympus Has Fallen. By-the-book hostage flick is full of bombs, bodies and bad guys

Richard: Olympus Has Fallen is about as standard as action movies get. It's so standard that the two most presidential of actors — Aaron Eckhart and Morgan Freeman — both play the Commander in Chief. This movie has everything you expect, which, if you have low expectations — and you should — is guns, bombs and at least one character who comforts a mortally wounded man with the words, "C'mon! Hang in there!"

Imagine Red Dawn with fewer teenagers and a bigger body count.

Mark: With a plot ripped from the pages of season 3 of 24, the movie still satisfies the craving for high body count and low originality. If you like to think one man can make a difference then this is the film for you. A B minus movie to be sure but with A level actors and direction.

RC: I liked how director Antoine "Training Day" Fuqua embraces the '80s-style B-movieness of it all. It's all bash, boom, bang with a side of motive — evil North Korean mastermind Rick Yune wants to reignite the Korean civil war the U.S. interrupted — and the kind of patriotism that only ever shows up in movies like this. For example, Banning crushes a bad guy's skull with a statue of Abraham Lincoln.

MB: I think this movie might have a different effect on Canadian audiences who wouldn't be quite so moved to patriotism. And remember, when some nutcase stormed into 24 Sussex during the Chr tien era, the PM brained him with an Eskimo carving. Game over!

RC: Ha! This movie isn't really about the patriotism, or any of that flag-waving stuff. It's all about the body count.

The first 20 minutes or so is spent on "character development," an attempt to make stock characters — like the charming but fearless Secret Service agent — but it really begins with the audacious attack and the ensuing mayhem. I think if you had a poster of Dolph Lundgren on your wall in 1984 or rent JCVD movies today you'll likely find a kindred spirit in Olympus Has Fallen.

MB: Still, I enjoyed this movie because I'm partial to thrillers that take place in one defined space. You mentioned Lundgren but I'm thinking the lead might have been played by Bruce Willis in his early Die Hard days.

Actress has no trouble with a double

The Host. Saoirse Ronan had fun with duelling roles in Stephen Meyer's latest imagining

NED

Metro World News in Hollywood

Talking to herself comes naturally to young Irish actress Saoirse Ronan, so her dual roles in The Host weren't really that daunting. In the film — based on Twilight author Stephenie Meyer's novel — Ronan plays a human named Melanie living in a future where alien parasites have come to earth and lodged themselves in the brains of humans, taking over their bodies and fixing the planet in the process. Melanie gets implanted, leading to the alien Wanda taking over her body, but with one complication: Melanie doesn't go away, remaining as a rather upset voice in Wanda's head.

That means a good amount

Saoirse Ronan, right, stars in The Host, which opens next Friday. HANDOUT of the movie consists of Ronan having conversations with her own voiceover. "That was a big question for me when I was going into it was how we were going to do this," Ronan says. Eventually, she and director Andrew Niccol settled on an earpiece that would transmit Ronan's prerecorded Melanie dialogue on Niccol's cue, something none of Ronan's co-stars could hear. "I talk to myself so much anyway that it was just like a normal day for me," she says. "So it was a very natural thing for me to talk to myself."

While Meyer's mega-hit vampire series revolved around a love triangle between a hu-

Saoirse Ronan on having dialogue with herself in The Host man girl, a vampire and a werewolf, she clearly felt the need to up the complexity factor for her followup. In The Host, Melanie has a boyfriend (Max Irons) from before she becomes inhabited, which becomes more of a problem when another human survivor (Jake Abel) becomes interested in Wanda — while she's inhabiting Melanie's body. So what exactly do we call a situation like that? It's not exactly a love triangle anymore.

"We're saying it's a love square," Ronan says. "Or a love rectangle, or I think a love parallelogram is another. I quite like that one. It's kind of impressive. So yeah, you can take your pick. As long as it has four sides, you know."

Family/Animation

The Croods

Directors. Chris Sanders, Kirk De Micco

Stars. Nicolas Cage, Emma Stone

In Hollywood, what goes around comes around and so I suppose it's time for a new version of The Flintstones. The Croods is the new modern stone-age family — only this clan is so nervous of colourful prehistoric creatures, they rarely leave their beloved cave — except for their restless daughter of course. While there's nothing quite original in the juvenile dialogue, a few worthy gags and a frantic pace certainly keeps The Croods from ever being a snooze. STEVE GOW

Comedy

Admission

Director. Paul Weitz

Stars. Tina Fey, Paul Rudd

As an uptight admissions officer for Princeton University, Tina Fey brings the fragility of 30 Rock's Liz Lemon but hardly as many laughs. When she unwittingly falls for a new-age teacher (Rudd) attempting to get his autodidact student accepted, she's forced to face some harsh truths. Fey may battle contrived plotting and being upstaged by her underused feminist mother (Lily Tomlin), but Admission is still smarter than the average adult comedy.

Drama

Stoker

Stars. Nicole Kidman, Matthew Goode, Dermot Mulroney

Director. Chan-Wook Park

The first English-language film from Korean master Chan-Wook Park, Stoker is a slow burn of a movie involving the Stoker family — mother Evie, daughter India and creepy uncle Charlie.

Stoker is a sexual/psychological drama with overtones of incest, mental illness and infidelity. Question is, will it keep audiences entertained? Possibly, but the uneasy feel of the film and deliberate aloofness of the characters may be off-putting.

The young and the greatness

Elle Fanning, 14, does some incredible work as a teenager caught up in the anti-nukes activism of 1960s London in the new coming-of-age drama Ginger & Rosa. Here's a look at five other child actresses who have wowed:

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Shirley Temple

The original. What precocious little girl hasn't watched Temple singing and dancing to On the Good Ship Lollipop and thought to herself: "That looks like fun — I want to do that too"? Of course, we all couldn't do it because she had that rare "thing" — that spark, that zest, that glow. She also worked her butt off perfecting her craft at a very young age — she started dancing at three.

Elizabeth Taylor

In her early, family-friendly films such as Lassie Come Home and especially National Velvet, Taylor had a startling and mature beauty for someone her age. Something about her aura radiated a grace and sophistication well beyond her years. Those mesmerizing eyes, that luxurious dark hair and flawless skin. It was as if she never went through the sort of awkward pre-adolescent stage the rest of us endured.

Jodie Foster

As she said in her rambling speech at this year's Golden Globes, she's been in the public eye since age three. Now at 50, the two-time Oscar winner is a great example of remaining strong and vital throughout the transition from child stardom to adulthood. Foster had confidence and swagger from her earliest days — it's evident even in something silly like a guest appearance on The Partridge Family.

Kirsten Dunst

She started modelling and appearing in commercials when she was only a few years old, but her breakout role at age 12 was playing the adorably creepy vampire Claudia opposite Tom Cruise and Brad Pitt in Interview With the Vampire. Great choices from there have included Sofia Coppola's The Virgin Suicides, Marie Antoinette and Michel Gondry's dreamlike Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind.

Abigail Breslin

She was one of the youngest-ever Oscar nominees at age 10 for her charming, vulnerable and ultimately inspiring performance as awkward pageant contestant Olive in the crowd-pleasing indie Little Miss Sunshine. But she made an impression even earlier than that when she made her film debut at just five in M. Night Shyamalan's Signs.

Lisa Loeb has decided to Stay

No Fairy Tale. The singer is happy to wax nostalgic about the 1990s

LINDA LABAN
scene@metronews.ca

With that all-American smile and those sexy secretary glasses, Lisa Loeb still looks like the smart-cute girl who burst onto the music scene almost two decades ago with her hit song Stay (I Missed You). Loeb's winter-released seventh album No Fairy Tale finds her reminiscing on a song called The '90s.

"I'm very nostalgic about the '90s," says Loeb. "Chad Gilbert, who co-produced and instigated this project, wanted me to write [the] song. At first, I was hesitant because I didn't want to write something that was kitschy and cute. Then when I started thinking about it, the '90s was particularly exciting because that's when I started to become successful as a musician."

Loeb also used the song to correct a misconception that pigeonholed her as a solo folk-pop singer-songwriter.

"I decided to write about making my video for Stay," she says. "That kick-started the commercial side of my career, but I didn't get to play with my band. The video was really cool. Ethan Hawke directed it, and Ethan's vision for a one-take video was much stronger than me getting to show everybody my rock band. For years, I always felt I had to prove myself: 'I play with a band, I'm not just a solo singer who walks around my studio apartment. I'm not a folk singer, I'm a lot of other things.'"

Yeah, I missed you

Some might think this is a return to the spotlight, but Loeb has been keeping busy long since the success of Stay.

"I've had radio DJs who are like, 'Well where have you been? You disappeared there,'" she says. "I'm like, 'Actually, I was just in San Francisco playing with my band, and then the year before that I was there for a kids' book festival' — the list goes on and on."

No Fairy Tale is very much a collaborative album. Loeb produced it with Gilbert (of New Found Glory), and guests include Tegan and Sara, Hello Goodbye and Morgan Taylor.

Zero new HIV infections
Zero stigma and discrimination
Zero AIDS-related deaths

Mythbusters!

HIV is a big city issue, only junkies and gay guys get it.

Busted! HIV knows no geographical boundaries. If you are having unprotected sex or sharing needles you are at risk of contracting HIV.

Why get tested? I am not at risk.

Busted! Having unprotected sex even once can put you at risk. Getting tested is about knowing your status and taking control of your health. Testing is accurate, quick and confidential.

The temporary workers brought HIV to our rural community

Busted! HIV is transmitted by high risk behaviours, not by a type of person. Anyone having unprotected sex and sharing needles can be at risk for transmitting HIV.

I can get HIV by kissing an HIV-infected person.

Busted! Pucker up! Contact through casual kissing is not a risk for transmission of HIV.

I can get HIV from someone working at the local café.

Busted! Did you know that 1 in 4 rural Canadians believed that HIV could be transmitted by sharing a glass of water? This myth is busted! HIV is primarily transmitted through unprotected sexual contact or sharing of needles with an infected person not through casual contact.

Condoms don't work...

Busted! Condoms are not only cool but when used consistently and correctly help prevent all sexually transmitted infections!

Seniors don't have sex so there is no risk of HIV

Busted! Sexy seniors! Sexual desire does not decrease but sexual health information does! 11% of new AIDS cases are in people over 50. Get informed and inform your beloved seniors who may be having unsafe fun!

These are only a few of the many myths around HIV and AIDS that still exist. HIV Edmonton works to inform the public about HIV and AIDS and is working to get to Zero. Zero new HIV infections. Zero stigma and discrimination. Zero AIDS related deaths. For more information go to www.hivedmonton.com or e-mail contact@hivedmonton.com

British songwriter changes course

Tooth & Nail. Mother's death forces Billy Bragg to re-evaluate his music career

This year marks the 30th anniversary of Billy Bragg's spare, politically charged debut EP Life's a Riot with Spy Vs Spy. But the adaptable British singer/songwriter says he's still trying to figure out his place in this peculiar industry.

Two years ago, the death of Bragg's mother gave him particular reason to pause and re-evaluate his music career. He returned after a five-year absence from recording Tuesday with Tooth & Nail, his first album since 2008's Mr. Love & Justice.

The gently melodic, emotionally tender set has been hailed as a return to form for the 55-year-old in such publications as the Guardian and Mojo.

In an interview with The Canadian Press, Bragg admits he'll be closely watching the reaction to the release.

How did your mother's death set you on a path that led to Tooth & Nail?

Well, my mum passed in early 2011, and I think when something like that happens, you can't fail but look around. All of a sudden there's a generational shift and I'm the oldest person in the family now. It makes you think to yourself: "Why are you doing this? Is what I'm doing worthwhile? Or am I just drifting?"

So I started looking at a practical way of discovering whether there is room in the recording industry in 2013 for Billy Bragg. Or whether what I've been doing for the past five years — which is working at a cottage-industry level, putting out CDs and selling them like

T-shirts (at shows) — maybe that's my niche now.

So the release of the

This year marks the 30th anniversary of Billy Bragg's spare, politically charged debut EP Life's a Riot with Spy Vs Spy. VEGARD GROTTE/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

album is the culmination of that quest — he says, sounding like Frodo Baggins.

Was your mother supportive of your music?

There's a fabulous bit in the (making-of) documentary about (the 1998 album) Mermaid Avenue, where I was sitting on the sofa with her and the director says, "Do you like Billy's records?" And she sort of looks away, and says, "Well, you know, the school did lead us to expect more" (laughs).

She wasn't dismissive of it, but I don't think she wanted me getting on my high horse just because I had been in the newspapers and on the telly. She did choose one of my songs for her own funeral service. So obviously she did like my music after all.

Tooth & Nail* is more about love than politics. Why?

The majority of the songs on the record are based in relationships, but that's also partly the nature of the way we hear music now. Now if I write a topical song, I get it uploaded as soon as I can for free download. It's almost like a newscast. As a result of that, when I come to make an album, I find that the predominant songs in my woodshed are songs about deeper things, about emotions. And I don't think that's a bad thing because I would hate for everything to be about politics. I've played with bands like that and they can be a bit hard-going.

When you started this project you wanted to figure out where you stood. Do you have clarity now?

I definitely have a sense of direction again, but what I'm interested to do now is to find out where I fit in the recording industry, because I know where I am in the music industry — people love coming to see me play.

(But) the industry's changing much faster than I can put out records. So when you've worked out where your niche is, the next time you look, the niche isn't even there anymore. I'm not complaining about this, by the way. I'm just being honest.

Rather than being complacent ... we do have to step back and look at it, and try to perhaps tailor what we're doing a little more to where the medium is now.

Mad Men star Jon Hamm is 'a big fan' of JT's suit and tie

Mad Men star Jon Hamm is going mad over Justin Timberlake's suit and tie — the song and the singer's style.

"I'm a big fan of Justin Timberlake," Hamm said in a recent interview. "I think he's a trendsetter, as they say. But he's always been kind of a natty dresser."

The 42-year-old actor, who says he has an "appreciation for fashion," returns as womanizing ad man Don Draper when season six premieres April 7 on AMC.

Seeing Mad Men style infiltrate pop culture — from Taylor Swift's mod minidress on the March cover of Elle magazine to Timberlake's ode to old Hollywood glamour with his latest hit, Suit & Tie, is the ultimate compliment for Hamm.

"It's nice that our show has had that sort of serendipitous resonance with fashion," he said. "I think it's great. I think it's really cool."

As for Timberlake, Hamm believes the pop star is "a very fashion-forward kind of guy," although the Grammy winner is guilty of at least one "fashion don't."

"That one unfortunate picture of him in that denim tuxedo excused," Hamm said with a smile, referring to Timberlake's all-denim ensemble at the 2001 American Music Awards. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

How Phil Spector Lost that Lovin' Feelin'

HBO movies.

Al Pacino can't remember the first time he met the music producer, but steps into the role of a man who fell from the spotlight

Much to his surprise, Al Pacino learned that once upon a time he met the legendary music producer Phil Spector, whom he now plays in a new HBO film.

He had no memory of it, "but somebody showed me a picture of me and him on the Internet," Pacino laughs. "It was at some event or party, and we're both looking into the camera, two guys who do not want to be photographed. Since he had mostly worked behind the scenes, I didn't know who he was, and he looked like he didn't know who I was."

That was then, whenever that was. Now, spurring after-the-fact speculation, this forgotten encounter serves Pacino as a fitting first step into the character he captures for Phil Spector. (It premieres Sunday night)

Written and directed by David Mamet, this penetrating film explores the preparation for Spector's murder defence. As the story begins in 2007, he stands accused of having forced a pistol into the mouth of a woman — his by-chance date for the night — and pulling the trigger.

The difficulties of the case seem beyond the wherewithal of Spector's original attorney (played by Jeffrey Tambor in a robust supporting performance), who has brought in hot-shot lawyer Linda

"It was at some event or party, and we're both looking into the camera, two guys who do not want to be photographed. Since he had mostly worked behind the scenes, I didn't know who he was."

Al Pacino
Talking about the time he met Phil Spector

Kenney Baden (the splendid Helen Mirren). She takes over as lead attorney and, as the film unfolds, joins Spector in a verbal pas de deux that teems with Mamet's shrewd dialogue.

"Why do you have so many guns?" she inquires on her first visit to his sprawling castle home near Los Angeles, where the shooting took place. "I might need one," he replies.

"Why would you need more than one?"

"How many shoes do you have?" he poses. "How many feet?"

Spector is gnomish, unstable and grandiose. "Extraordinary accomplishments," he says, meaning his own, "transform the grateful into an audience — and the envious into a mob."

So he's a problem for his lawyers. He says he didn't kill the girl, but who's going to believe him?

His lawyers know that, in the mind of the modern-day public, he is not the music wizard who created the girl-group sound in the early 1960s, co-wrote You've Lost That Lovin' Feelin' for the Righteous Brothers and produced records for the Ramones and the Beatles. Instead, by 2007, he's generally regarded as a creepy, homicidal has-been who hides out with his dozens of guns and his dozens of outlandish wigs — a pint-sized wacko too big for his britches.

But there are a few inarguable truths about Spector. One is that in 2009, he was convicted of second-degree murder and, at age 68, sentenced to 19 years to life.

Another is that, for record buyers of a certain age, his music reigned as the soundtrack for youthful seduction.

The HBO film acts as an interesting contrast of a man who left the limelight.

our shared mythologies, faiths and even more terrifyingly, in real life.

Straddling the line between the supernatural and grim reality is the character of Dr. Hannibal Lecter, writer Thomas Harris' malevolent intellectual anti-hero, star of four books and five blockbuster films, essayed first by Brian Cox (in Manhunter) and later by Oscar winning icon Anthony Hopkins (in Silence of the Lambs, Hannibal and Red Dragon).

Now, Hannibal, the television series, the brainchild of beloved writer Bryan Fuller (Heroes) and producer Martha DeLaurentiis (widow of the late mogul Dino DeLaurentiis), plays out as a prequel to the events in Harris' Red Dragon.

FBI profiler Will Graham (Hugh Dancy) is assigned by bureau chief Jack Crawford (Laurence Fishburne) to seek council with the brilliant Dr. Lecter (Danish superstar Mads Mikkelsen) a respected psychotherapist.

Each week the trio become closer, teaming up to stop a cavalcade of serial killers.

Of course, no one knows that Lecter is in fact the most deranged of them all.

"That's the thing we have to be most careful with," Fishburne, whose extensive credits include films like Just Cause, Deep Cover and The Matrix trilogy, told us on set in Toronto.

"I'm not supposed to know. Nobody's supposed to know. The audience knows so it allows them to play along. The tension comes in waiting for me and Will to catch up. I have no reason to suspect Hannibal ... after all, I hired him."

Hannibal will debut on City on April 4. HANDOUT

The Walking Dead. Fans will get a satisfying meal in the finale: Mazzara

The Walking Dead has been zombie-shuffling toward an epic showdown for weeks.

And when it finally comes, it'll feature a major shocker for fans, promises departing showrunner Glen Mazzara.

The TV scribe says he approached the current season "as a historical novel" building toward "the first major battle between surviving groups in the aftermath of this zombie apocalypse."

"Everyone's in play now, everyone's on stage, everybody has a stake in it and I think it'll be a very interesting, surprising ending for the fans," Mazzara says in a recent phone interview from Los Angeles.

"I know it won't be what people will expect but I think hopefully it'll be emotionally satisfying."

The season three finale to The Walking Dead is just two episodes away and is expected to feature a long-awaited face-off between former cop-turned-survivalist Rick Grimes and his gang's villainous rival, the Governor.

A mother's love: a blessing or a curse?

Bates Motel. The TV prequel to Hitchcock's Psycho centres around Norma Bates's character as viewers watch her try to protect her son from himself Vera Farmiga has some advice for Norma Bates, her character in the new series Bates Motel: Honesty is always the best policy.

Honesty — or the lack of it — is a key theme in the 10-episode prequel to the classic Hitchcock film Psycho. The A&E show, which premiered Monday, reveals just what drove Norman Bates (Fredie Highmore) over the edge. In an interview Monday, the Oscar-nominated actress said Norman and his mother, Norma, are "harbouring a dark secret which will unfold as the series continues." Along with the everyday angst most parents experience, Norma "knows something about him that I think makes her hyper-protective," Farmiga said.

Farmiga didn't have a lot to go from to create her character. In Psycho, Norman's mother was a skeletal role.

(Although Farmiga did reveal that in an upcoming episode she dons the same hairstyle as Norman's mother from the original film.)

Farmiga, who has two toddlers of her own, said she studied hers and other maternal relationships around her to help her get into character.

She says in her mind Norma is a mother who is trying to be a good influence.

"Yeah, she's insane as any mother goes insane some-

"It's a very typical portrayal of maternity and its function and dysfunction and its victories and defeats. She doesn't always make the right decisions."

Anyone who has seen Psycho knows none of this ends well.

While Farmiga acknowledges that the characters are doomed, she says Bates Motel wants the audience to root for them, "to hope against hope that maybe things turn out differently."

Earlier this week, I wrote about the Jackson family's wrongful death lawsuit against AEG Live for $40 billion and how the entertainment giant wants to get the paternity of Jackson's children entered into court proceedings.

The Jackson family are fighting this, calling into question who actually is the father of Blanket, Paris and Prince Jackson.

And upon further reflection (and Googling), I am pretty confident that the father of Prince Jackson is none other than Corey Feldman. These pictures don't lie, friends. Can someone call Maury Povich?

Rehab doesn't seem to be getting in the way of Lohan's love life

Just because Lindsay Lohan is facing 90 days in rehab doesn't mean she can't keep cultivating her love life. The troubled starlet is rumoured to be dating NYC-based club promoter and musician Avi Snow, according to E! News, though sources say the pair's relationship is still in "the early stages." But Snow was reportedly one of the passengers on the private jet that whisked Lohan to court Monday morning, and after she had her latest mug shot taken the next day she hur-

Is that Jon Hamm, or are you just happy to see me?

Jon Hamm's physical attributes are causing quite a stir on the Mad Men set, according to the New York Daily News. "This season takes place in the 1960s, where the pants are very tight and leave little to the imagination," a source tells the newspaper. "Jon's impressive anatomy is so distracting that they politely insisted on underwear." Hamm's rep is not amused. "It is ridiculous and not really funny at all," the rep said.

Watch out, John John ... Taylor Swift has her eye on you

Taylor Swift has reportedly set her sights on 20-year-old pro surfer John John Florence, according to Life & Style, though their budding relationship is still mostly on a telecommunications level. "He and Taylor have been text messaging," a source says. "Apparently she contacted him. I don't think they have hung out yet. They've just been chatting. John John doesn't want to ruin things, so he's being careful not to say too much."

Depending on where you are in this great country, the weather may look more like a winter wonderland than spring. Somebody forgot to tell Mother Nature that we had a change of season this week.

While I hate pigeon-holing certain wines to particular seasons, fresh, floral whites really do come across like spring in a glass. It doesn't hurt that they pair well with the bright, fresh food fare that tends to get served this time of year.

Wines made with the riesling, gewürztraminer and viognier grapes lead the charge when it comes to whites with plush fruit flavours and aromatics.

Viognier in particular is one of my favourites. Originating in France, it's grown worldwide, always packing its classic tropical depth and subtle peppiness that pair so well with lighter meats (like pork) and fruit-accented sauces (especially those with a citrusy influence).

Cono Sur's 2011 Bicicleta Viognier ($9.95 - $11.99) from Chile is a budget friendly version with soft lime and lemon accents and just a wink to the grape's spicy persona.

PRICES REFLECT THE RANGE ACROSS THE COUNTRY. SOME PRODUCTS MAY NOT BE AVAILABLE IN ALL PROVINCES.

A fine balance of cherries and coffee

Cherry-Topped Coffee-Roasted Pork Tenderloin. This combination of fresh flavours is ideal to serve during spring

Coffee is becoming a favourite ingredient when roasting meat.

It's an effortless way to add gobs of flavour to your meal. All you do is add whole coffee beans to whatever spice blend you are using as a wet or dry rub, then grind it to a powder and apply to the meat. The coffee provides deep, rich flavours with a hint of acid.

The seasonings can be applied to the meat right before roasting. But if you have time, the flavour is even better if you rub the spices on the meat, then refrigerate it for several hours.

If you're looking for a simple and speedy dinner, make the roasted pork tenderloin in this recipe and serve it as is with a side salad. For something party-worthy, slice it, slap

This recipe makes 36 appetizers. MATTHEW MEAD/ THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ingredients

- 1 tbsp coffee beans
- 1 tsp garlic powder
- 1 tsp fennel seeds
- 1 tsp smoked paprika
- 1 tsp whole peppercorns
- 1 tsp kosher salt
- 3 lbs pork tenderloins
- 1 baguette, thinly sliced into 36 rounds
- Olive oil
- 10-oz jar cherry jam it on rounds of baguette, then top with a dollop of cherry jam.

1. Heat the oven to 400 F. Line a rimmed baking sheet with foil and coat with cooking spray.

2. In a spice grinder, combine the coffee beans, garlic powder, fennel seeds, paprika, peppercorns and salt. Grind until the beans and seeds are finely ground. Rub the spice-coffee blend evenly and liberally over the tenderloins. Set the tenderloins on the prepared baking sheet, then roast for 20 minutes, or until they reach 145 F at the centre. Remove from the oven and let rest for 5 minutes.

3. Meanwhile, brush the ba-guette slices with olive oil, then arrange on a baking sheet and toast for 2 minutes, or until just barely browned.

4. When the pork is ready, cut it into thin slices. To serve, place one slice of pork on each piece of baguette, then top with a small dollop of jam.

Teetotallers welcome

If you've never had a classic High Tea, here's your chance. Manor Bistro is hosting an evening of food and bevvy March 24 courtesy of the High Street Social Club. Expect the unusual, such as pu erh and lapsang souchong. Guests are encouraged to dress in classic tea time attire. Communal eating and a welcome cocktail are included in the $55 ticket. Visit Manor Bistro, at 10109-125 St., for details, or call 780-482-7577. Tut, tut, hurry along.

Renew, refresh, renovate

Dust off those paint brushes, hammers and spades — it's time for Edmonton's Home and Garden Show, on now through March 24 at the Edmonton Expo Centre. HGTV handyman Paul Lafrance and builder Bryan Baeumler are featured speakers, but the event is chock-full of tips for your own little (or big) project. Exhibitors will talk trends too, and there's a contest or two for good measure. Tickets are $15; kids under 12 get in free. I'm feeling spring-y just thinking about it. See edmonton-homeshow.com for more.

Trinkets and treasures

Spring is here — time to clean out your basement/garage/attic and ponder those knick-knacks granny left you. Hold off on any decisions until you take in the first of a speakers' series called Grandma's Attic, March 22 from 7 to 9 p.m. at Rutherford House. Antiques expert Johanne Yakula will talk about those often sentimental trinkets; guests are welcome to bring items for appraisal, too. Coffee and tea will be served at the lovely, historic property. Tickets and info are at rutherfordhouse.ca.

I'll have a double double

We Canadians bond over our Tim Hortons, don't we? The iconic Timmy's serves as a backdrop for Workshop West Theatre's latest offering, Double Double — a romantic comedy in an unlikely setting. Writer Kenneth Brown serves up food for thought in this world premiere play, a thoughtful tale of new relationships and the need for connection. The show runs until April 7 at La Cite (8627-91 St.). Tickets are $25 at the Workshop West Theatre box office, or call 780-477-5955. Visit workshopwest.org for more.

Spring Break fun

If you're looking for ways to entertain the kids this spring break, a visit to the Royal Alberta Museum could easily occupy a day or two. This Sunday is an especially good time to visit, with plenty of free activities with paid admission. There's morning story time, Arctic Explorers (with a craft), art of the museum tour and up-close encounters with museum specimens and artifacts — human and otherwise! C'mon parents, let someone else take care of the kids for a few hours. See royalalbertamuseum.ca for activity times.

Crooning at the Club

Have you been to the Club at the Citadel yet? It's unique in E-town — a much-needed cabaret to showcase artists in an intimate venue. On March 22 and 23, multi-talented Citadel stage veteran Rejean Cournoyer presents The Music of Jacques Brel — a bilingual celebration of a diverse and eclectic songbook — with the talents of Don Horsburgh on piano and Jason Kodie on accordion and guitar. CFL

Television deal reportedly worth more than $30M

A significant television deal with TSN/RDS bodes well for the CFL's future, commissioner Mark Cohon said Thursday.

The five-year deal is worth "significantly" more than $30 million a season, according to a source.

That's chump change compared with the television contracts held by the NFL, the NHL and other major sports. But the new CFL deal reportedly is worth more than double the existing $15-million broadcasting package that runs through the end of the 2013 season.

Cohon wouldn't confirm the dollar amount except to say it was a "transformative deal" that would have a major impact on the economic stability of the league and its teams.

World Cup final to be played on artificial turf

B.C. Place Stadium will host the first-ever World Cup soccer final on artificial turf in 2015.

The Vancouver venue was named Thursday as the site for the 2015 Women's World Cup championship game. All other senior women's and men's finals have been played on grass, say organizers.

Montreal and Edmonton will host semifinal games in the tournament that runs June 6 to July 5 in six Canadian cities.

Canadian Olynyk leads Zags to win

March Madness. Gonzaga struggles early, but pulls out win in final minutes

Still don't think Gonzaga deserved that No. 1 seed? There might be a few more doubters now.

Entering the NCAA tournament top-seeded and top-ranked for the first time in program history, the Zags nearly made another kind of history Thursday — coming only a few minutes and a rimmed-out shot or two from becoming the first 1 to lose to a 16.

Gonzaga prevailed 64-58 over Southern University in a game that wasn't safely in hand until the final buzzer sounded. No. 1 seeds improved to 113-0 since the field was expanded to 64 teams in 1985.

Kelly Olynyk of Kamloops, B.C., led the Zags (32-2) with 21 points, though it was a pair of three-pointers — one by Gary Bell Jr., the next by Kevin Pangos — that gave Gonzaga its small cushion after Southern (23-10) tied things 56-56 with 3:45 left.

Bell's three made it 59-

56 after Derick Beltran hit a 14-footer on the baseline to close out a 15-4 Southern run and tie the game.

Beltran hit two free throws to cut the deficit to one, but Gonzaga responded by working the ball to Pangos, of Newmarket, Ont., whose three made it a four-point game.

Pangos (16 points) made two free throws with 14.3 seconds left to seal the deal. But when Zags coach Mark Few shook hands with his counterpart, Roman Banks, at midcourt, it was hard to tell who won; Banks looked like he was doing the consoling.

Homan on a roll into Page playoff

A mediocre start nearly derailed Rachel Homan's rink at the world women's curling championship.

The Canadian team stuck together early on as they battled nerves, a tough field and some challenging conditions in Riga, Latvia. The result is a solid third-place finish in the round-robin standings and a four-game winning streak heading into the Page playoff 3-4 matchup.

"They're all feeling very comfortable, calm, focused and confident," said Canadian coach Earle Morris. "Those are the kind of feelings you hope your team has

History of excellence

- Canada also leads with 15 gold medals, well ahead of second-place Sweden with eight.

when you're going into the playoffs."

Entering play Thursday, Homan controlled her own playoff destiny but was still flirting with the cutline.

She beat China's Bingyu Wang 7-4 in the morning and locked up the third seed with an 8-4 win over Japan's Satsuki Fujisawa in the afternoon.

Canada's next game is Saturday afternoon. Russia and Switzerland will play a tiebreaker Friday morning with the winner to face the United States in the second tiebreaker with the fourth seed on the line.

Scotland and Sweden finished 10-1 and will meet in the Page playoff 1-2 game Friday night.

The medal games are set for Sunday. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Woods trails Rose by four strokes early at Bay Hill

Justin Rose started out as another guy in Tiger Woods' group Thursday at Bay Hill. He wound up in the lead.

Rose put on a clinic with the putter and ran off four straight birdies late in his round for a 7-under 65, giving him a two-shot lead after the opening round of the Arnold Palmer Invitational.

Woods didn't hit it as well as in his recent win at Doral, but he scratched out a 69; a reasonable start as he tries to win Bay Hill for the eighth time and return to No. 1 in the world.

It was only the sixth time in 31 rounds at Bay Hill that Rose broke 70.

NHL. Devils goalie gets credit for his third career goal on a Hurricanes miscue

Martin Brodeur scored his third career goal and made 17 saves in his first game in a month, leading the New Jersey Devils to a 4-1 victory over the Carolina Hurricanes on Thursday night.

Brodeur had been out since Feb. 21 with a pinched nerve in his upper back and neck. New Jersey went 3-8-2 in his absence.

Peter Harrold, Adam Henrique and Andrei Loktionov also scored to help the Devils snap a three-game losing streak.

Jeff Skinner had the Hurricanes' lone goal.

Carolina has dropped five in a row to fall from the top of the Southeast Division. The Hurricanes have been outscored 17-6 during that stretch.

Carolina and New Jersey opened the night tied in the Eastern Conference standings with 32 points apiece.

Brodeur got credit for the game's first goal when Carolina's Jordan Staal passed the puck back to the point from behind the net with a delayed penalty call pending against New Jersey's Marek Zidlicky.

The pass missed intended target Tim Gleason and bounced off the boards near centre ice. Ellis had already skated toward the bench because of the delayed penalty and couldn't get back in time to prevent the puck from sliding into the net.

Because he was the last Devils player to touch the puck, Brodeur got credit for the score. With Carolina's Alexander Semin in the penalty box, it counted as a power-play goal.

Jets dealt Capital punishment in loss at home

Braden Holtby made 20 saves and Alexander Ovechkin had a goal and two assists as the Washington Capitals defeated the Winnipeg Jets 4-0 on Thursday.

Nicklas Backstrom scored and had an assist for Washington (13-16-1), while Troy Brouwer and Marcus Johansson added goals as well.

It was Holtby's fourth shutout of the season and second against the Jets. He also blanked Winnipeg 3-0 on March 2, the only times Winnipeg has been shut out this season.

Ondrej Pavelec faced 25 shots as the Jets (16-13-2) had their three-game home winning streak snapped.

Winnipeg stays in the Southeast Division's top spot and the third seed in the Eastern Conference, two points ahead of the Carolina Hurricanes, who lost 4-1 to New Jersey Thursday night.

Leafs' Lupul gets two-game ban

The NHL suspended Toronto Maple Leafs forward Joffrey Lupul for two games Thursday following his hit to the head of Tampa Bay defenceman Victor Hedman.

The incident occurred 45 seconds into the third period of Toronto's 4-2 win on Wednesday night. Lupul received a two-minute minor penalty for an illegal check when he hit Hedman in the head after the defenceman passed the puck.

It was just Lupul's second game back after missing 25 contests with a broken arm.

Pittsburgh Penguins captain Sidney Crosby says rule changes in the NHL have changed the way the game is played. GENE J. PUSKA/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Shift to safety has changed the NHL

For better or worse?

Sidney Crosby says rule changes have altered style of play

The fear is gone. The doubt too for that matter. Ditto the hesitation.

A year into his comeback from the concussion-like symptoms that nearly derailed Sidney Crosby's career, the Pittsburgh Penguins superstar is back atop the NHL scoring race thanks to his unparalleled mix of artistry, speed and grit.

Perhaps because Crosby doesn't have to worry about getting knocked around so much anymore.

Thanks to a series of rule changes made by the league and a shift in attitude by the guys wearing the sweaters, players say the NHL is as safe now as it's perhaps ever been.

In the two-plus years since

Crosby sustained a concussion following a blindside hit from Washington's David Steckel in the 2011 Winter Classic, the league has outlawed shots to the head entirely and given senior vice-president of player safety Brendan Shanahan great leeway in handing out punishment for dangerous plays.

"I know it's changed from my first couple years, that's for sure," Crosby said. "The game is much tighter."

Teams are averaging 3.6 power-play opportunities a game this season, down from 5.8 per game during Crosby's rookie year in 2005-06.

Part of the decline can be attributed to the decreasing amount of open ice. After offences flourished following the 2004-05 lockout, the pendulum has swung back to more conservative, defensive-minded schemes. The result is more clutching and grabbing, sure, but also a decision by players to avoid the kind of unnecessary penalties that can tilt games.

It doesn't always lead to thrilling hockey, but it can lead to smarter, safer play.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Quiet on concussions

Getting hard data on head injuries in the NHL is difficult since many teams remain vague about the nature of injuries.

- Body Language. Most injury reports never say more than "upper-body" or lower-body" injury.
- Gag order? The Penguins grew reticent after reigning NHL MVP Evgeni Malkin was injured in last month's game against the Panthers, taking two days to report he had suffered a concussion.

♈ Aries

March 21 - April 20

You may not think of yourself as a peacemaker but you will certainly be the one who calms things down today. Maybe it's because you believe in justice, but you will do your utmost to negotiate a truce.

♉ Taurus

April 21 - May 21

If you are convinced that what you are doing is right then what others think or say about it is irrelevant. Since when have you been the type to ask other people for permission?

♊ Gemini

May 22 - June 21

No one lives in isolation and what takes place over the next few hours will confirm that in a rather nice way. Just when you thought you were struggling all on your own, you discover you have genuine friends.

♋ Cancer

June 22 - July 23

Someone in authority will look favourably on you today and you must take advantage of it. If you can, work your way into a position where you can showcase your many talents. That "someone in authority" could soon be you.

♌ Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

Everything looks right with your world at the moment and with Venus moving in your favour today, whatever you do will work out just fine. That is if you can be bothered to make an effort.

♍ Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

Because you have been proved right, you may find it hard to be modest today but try not to be too self-congratulatory. If you boast too loudly, someone may try to burst your bubble.

♎ Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

If you maintain a positive attitude over the next 24 hours, there is a real chance that at least one of your fantasies will become a reality. Let's hope your heart is in good condition. The shock could be too much!

♏ Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

Some of your friends may not have been supportive of late but that does not mean they are turning against you. On the contrary, they are still very much on your side, it's just that they've been too busy to help.

♐ Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

With Venus joining the Sun in your fellow Fire sign of Aries today, you are flavour of the month. In your life and at work be the best you can be, and the world will love you for it.

♑ Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

Don't be afraid to tell others what you think today, but wrap it up in a thick layer of sugar coating. They will appreciate that you avoided hurting their feelings.

♒ Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

According to the planets, you are reluctant to get too involved in a situation that you fear could be emotionally traumatic. You are right to keep your distance but don't cut yourself off altogether. Be available if a crisis occurs.

♓ Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

Venus, planet of emotional and material values, leaves your birth sign today, but that is not a cause for despair. In fact, it could have very good results financially. Replenish your bank account. SALLY BROMPTON
